

28.2.17

A Great Escape

This is a story about Paul's grandmother Charlotte. She was fourteen years old and lived with her mother in Dublin.

Late one night, her mother came into her room and said, "Quick, quick." Charlotte went into her mother's bed and was just falling asleep when she felt something under her toes. It was a rebel.

A soldier burst into Charlotte's mother's room and Charlotte's mother said, "How dare you come into a lady's room." The soldier said, "Oh so sorry mam." "We're looking for a rebel," "Well you certainly won't find him in here," said Charlotte's mother. The soldier looked under a few clothes and into a few wardrobes and went away.

The rebel hiding in the bed came out and jumped onto a chair. He escaped through a window (skylight) in the ceiling. He ran across the rooftops and escaped.

BY NORI KLUZNIAK-MADA

Person telling me the story: Paul O Colmain

This person's Address:

Working Artist Studios,
North Street,
Co. Cork,
Ireland.

28th February 2017