

My Grandad's

Answer

The Answer

On 12 August 1947, Gandhi was getting India's Independence. On the other side of the city my grandfather was living in a big apartment and about 21. Some British soldiers barged into every apartment looking for food. When they were in my grandfather's apartment they couldn't find anything because my grandad hid it so well.

After some time the soldiers left. My grandfather drove to his friend's house. He told him what happened and his friend was shocked that he could be next to be robbed so he told my grandfather about Gandhi. Later my grandad and his friend were in a car driving to Gandhi. They found him walking on the beach peacefully. My grandfather and his friend walked beside him and told him about the British soldiers taking their food. Gandhi's answer was to go on a fast and hide all the food.

All the neighbourhood hid their food in a box under the ground when my grandad and his friend told everyone. The British soldiers got really annoyed that they have to buy the food like normal people.
